We addressed the unsolicited bulk email. They won't accept it or acknowledge it as it doesn't matter since we are still a list vendor selling emails. Asya is not going to give me another person to talk to.

I don't have a next step yet. I've been reading the Spamhaus website and other posts to come up with another suggestion.

Peter

Hello, Peter,

I've told you what needs to be done to resolve the issue in your favor.
You have to stop sending unsolicited bulk email, and stop selling lists.
 Those are both non-negotiable. Talking with another team member won't get you a different answer. (They are reviewing these emails in any event; sbl-removals@spamhaus.org is monitored by multiple people.)

I haven't stressed the solution because it was apparent that you do not view your business activities as spam. That puts us in fundamental disagreement. I don't see a way around this.

Thanks,

Asya

You are not allowing us as a company to explain the marketing issue we had and how we resolved it. It your intent in stopping spam, why are unwilling to work with companies like ours that made a mistake and willing to fix it?

These seems to be a bit much for a company that admitted to sending to a poor list for internal marketing and has reached out to you to have the issue resolved.

We're a service that warns people about entities that spam or provide services to senders of unsolicited bulk email (spam), so that they can block that email, whether it is legal to send that email or not in a particular jurisdiction.

Spamhaus considers the sales of databases or lists containing email addresses to be a spam support service. We cannot remove this SBL listing as long as your company either spam s or provides this or other spam support services.
